evidence-based practices for people with severe mental illness

Recovery stories highlight triumphs, challenges of personal journeys

We've added a new "Recovery Stories" section on our web site. This evolving collection of stories highlights the positive outcomes of evidence-based practices (EBPs) and other services for people diagnosed with mental illness or co-occurring mental illness and substance use disorders. The stories are told by consumers, family members, and other supporters of recovery, such as employers and direct-service providers. They discuss openly the challenges and triumphs of recovery, as well as insights and advocacy gained along the way.

We invite and encourage you to share these stories in your organizations, classrooms, and communities.
